ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION

see continuation sheet

Describe architectural features. Evaluate the characteristics of this building in terms of other buildings within the community.

The Abner Jones house is a one and a half story full Cape Cod barn-like building on a rectangular plan, the front facade facing south toward River Road, and gabled extension to the east. At some time late in the nineteenth century it was a double house for the Mecarta family, one living in the original Cape to the west, and the other in the east wing. The east part has a three-sided bay window on the south side, and entrance to the left. The west part had a square root cellar lined with nineteenth century bricks which have been set into the fireplace of the 1969 house. The foundation is mortared stone. Each half had a fireplace and central chimney. It is clad in cedar shingle with no visible paint on the trim.

Ten feet from the northwest corner is a mortared stone foundation, about 10 feet deep. The original barn lay about 100 feet to the east. Between this and the house is a modern bunkhouse on concrete blocks, moved here in the 1960s. A hundred yards farther east, on the crest of the hill is the one story residence built in 1969. Below this, to the southwest, on River Road is the site of the Isaac Jones boghouse (see MM N-15).

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE

Discuss the history of the building. Explain its associations with local (or state) history. Include uses of the building, and the role(s) the owners/occupants played within the community.

The full Cape Cod cottage is believed to have been built by Abner⁵ Jones (1761-1844) (Isaac⁴⁻³, Jedidiah², Sandwich Quaker pioneer Ralph¹), perhaps on his marriage to Anna Fish (1764-1835) on 16 Dec. 1785. In 1835 he divided the house and barn with his only son Isaac⁶ Sprague Jones (1801-66), trader and farmer. Isaac had married Abigail "Nabby" H. Hamblin (1808-94), 11th of the 15 children of Lewis⁵ (Benjamin⁴⁻³, John², James¹). Isaac was a pioneer cranberry grower on 1 1/2 acre at Muddy Pond (SE), an acre on Old Newtown, and 5/8 next to A.D. Makepeace's Baker Bog. Isaac built the storage shed that has been moved 100 yards south for Marion Oldham (see MM N-15).

Isaac's wife Nabby continued to live here until her death in 1894, but the whole property was inherited by his only child, Lydia Ann (1832-1923) who married Orrin Mecarta (1844-1923). They lived in the west side of the Jones homestead, sharing it with her brother-in-law the postmaster Dennis Mecarta and his wife Harriet A. Crocker until they built and moved to the Post House in Marstons Mills village. Orrin and Dennis had come from Harwich, and Orrin took over running the bogs.

Again, on Lydia's death the estate went in the female line to the only survivors, the family of Harriet and Dennis's daughter Minnie Emily Mecarta, who died in the flu epidemic of 1919. She had married the chauffeur Winfred Boyden Lovell (d. 1948) of Wakeby, by whom she had the present owner Marion Lovell (b. 1909), a school teacher married to William Oldham of Providence. Marion inherited the Isaac Jones homestead. The other half of the estate went from Winfred to the daughter by his second wife, Mary (Freitas/Fratus), Kathleen who married Clarence Farrar, born in Castleford, Yorkshire. Clarence and Kathleen built the new house in 1969, having moved the bunkhouse here earlier in the sixties. The property is now occupied by their son Stephen R. L. Farrar (b. 1957), librarian at Woods Hole and graduate student in library science at Simmons College, and his wife, archivist Judy Wineland, and their two sons Eric (b. 1997) and Maxwell (b. 2000).

The original Cape was torn down in the fifties, while the east half was still occupied. It was abandoned after the new house was built.
